Visit to Shanti Van

In Collaboration with

Department of Environment, Government of India

Shanti Van is a sprawling city forest area near Rajghat and Dariya gunj in Delhi, India. It is spread over an area of 783 acres. It is one of the most thickly wooded areas of the city's green lungs. The place is mainly known for its diverse species of living organism. The eco club students visited to this place on 16th Oct 2018 as a part of their project work (Total 10 students). They met many people who are continuously engaged in the process for the protection of the environment. They also met people who are responsible for the protection of these conserved places although they are employed by upper authorities but the role they are playing by serving this area with dedication is something worth more than only employment, they shared many things such as what are the things which are harming the environment and With this project they got the opportunity to dig more into this beautiful world which they were unaware of and got the knowledge of flora and fauna, birds, small animals and many other organisms which seems to have not been visible normally but are so much important for the survival of mankind. They also get to know about the threats to these species and how they can help them replenish by just a minimal cost of being a responsible person. They get the feeling that how many things have been left unexplored in this world and the project has finally able to take them to the point where one could wonder about this world and starts exploring it more and more.
