The participation from students showcased their creativity and artistic skills through innovative and visually appealing posters that highlighted various cities and destinations. The posters depicted famous landmarks, cultural aspects, and unique features of the chosen locations.

Held online, the competition not only provided a platform for students to showcase their artistic talents but also encouraged them to learn more about different cities and dream destinations. It promoted an understanding of the significance of tourism in promoting cultural exchange and economic growth.

Around 25 students participated in this event. After careful consideration, the winners were announced. Shubham Dimri from Jain University, Bangalore, secured the first place. Nikita Pathania from Ramlal Anand College, won the second place. The third place was awarded to Hritik Sharma from Shyam Lal College.

Overall, the poster-making competition on World Tourism Day organized by Litworms was a great success that demonstrated the importance of tourism and encouraged students to embrace diverse cultures and explore the world.
