We recently took part in the Yuvaspanda event organized by the Enactus of Shyam Lal College, University of Delhi. This event provided an exceptional opportunity for us to present our innovative projects and connect with a dynamic community of students, faculty, and other attendees.

Our day began with our team arriving at the Shyam Lal College campus around 10:30 a.m. We were pleased to find that securing a stall space was free of charge. The stall was arranged in such a way that help to draw in visitors and showcase our projects: Sahajsmita, Pawshaak, and Swarnkriti. Each display included detailed information boards, eye-catching visuals, and interactive components to effectively engage the audience.

Throughout the day, our team members enthusiastically interacted with a diverse group of attendees, including students, teachers, and other participants. These interactions not only facilitated the exchange of knowledge but also allowed us to network with like-minded individuals passionate about social entrepreneurship and community development.

By 3:30PM, we wrapped up our activities at the stall. Our participation in the Yuvaspanda event at Shyam Lal College was immensely successful. We effectively showcased our projects, engaged with numerous attendees, took part in event activities, and achieved financial profitability. This experience significantly boosted our visibility and credibility within the community and provided valuable learning experiences for our team members.
