Venue:- SRCC

On 22nd February, 2025, the prestigious Delhi University Literature Fest (DULF) unfolded within the iconic campus of Shri Ram College of Commerce (SRCC), celebrating the rich tapestry of literature, art, and culture. The Fine Arts, Photography, and Culture Society (FPCS) of Shyam Lal College proudly partnered in this grand fest, bringing a creative spark and artistic spirit to the event.

The theme of the fest, “Voices of a Changing India,” invited participants to dive deep into the stories, traditions, and transitions of our country—bridging the gap between heritage and modern expression. As a partner, FPCS curated a vibrant art installation zone and a live mural station, where students captured the pulse of India’s literary soul through colors, strokes, and visual storytelling.

The event commenced with orientation and coordination briefings, following which the collaborating societies set up their installations and workshops. FPCS’s dedicated team of 10 student artists and photographers showcased an interactive visual journey that mirrored the fest’s literary focus. Their live mural, built over the course of the day, became a major attraction, drawing attention from authors, professors, and students alike.

Throughout the day, the fest featured open mic sessions, poetry slams, author interactions, and cultural performances. The FPCS segment remained one of the most visited and appreciated zones, where art met voice, and tradition met innovation. The installation was a beautiful blend of literature and canvas, with each artwork inspired by themes from classic and contemporary Indian writing.

The event was organized with meticulous care—ensuring originality, smooth transitions between sessions, and creative synergy among all participating societies. The teacher coordinators and volunteers from SRCC and FPCS worked hand-in-hand to ensure seamless execution throughout the eight-hour celebration.

As the day came to an end, the efforts of every participating team were acknowledged with certificates and tokens of appreciation. The presence and contribution of FPCS were personally recognized by the organizing committee, further cementing the society's role in making DULF 2025 a memorable and impactful celebration of art and literature.
